Worm Farming

Worm farms are a great way to turn leftover kitchen scraps into fertiliser without taking up much space. Even if you have a balcony instead of a backyard, all you need is a cool spot with lots of shade. Just buy or make a worm farm, get some worms and start feeding them. Worms are not included with the worm farm but can be picked up at hardware stores, nurseries or through on-line retailers. They will produce soil-like 'castings' and a liquid which both make great natural fertiliser.

Bokashi Bucket

The Bokashi Bucket is a simple and convenient composting system designed to be stored in your kitchen. The use of microorganisms in the Bokashi Mix permits rapid fermentation, eliminating the odours associated with putrefaction and decay. You can compost fresh fruit and vegetables, prepared foods, cooked and uncooked meats and fish, dairy, eggs, bread, coffee grinds, tea bags, wilted flowers and tissues. Full instructions are provided with each bucket purchase.
